Bestsellers on the European Union

by Françoise Crowell (Manager, Collection Development, International Sales Division, YBP Library Services, 999 Maple Street, Contoocook, NH 03229; Phone: 800-258-3774 x.3270, Fax: 603-746-5628) <fcrowell@YBP.com>

Every morning as I get ready for work I listen to the BBC American Eworld News. It is interesting because many of the events reported on do not make it to NPR Morning Edition that I listen to on the ride in to work. Now this seems to be changing and European news is becoming US news. Mad Cow, Hoof and Mouth, the Euro are all now part of our vocabulary. The European Union and the disintegration of national borders is big news. It is a growing topic for publishing as well. Over 250 scholarly titles on the EU were published in the last 12 months. Here are 50 of the top sellers covering most notably the environment, the Euro and the role of Europe in the World. Not quite travel reading, but certainly important additions to a library's collection.

statements online (not just firm orders). The reporting capabilities will be enhanced to include a report scheduler for the automatic production of standard reports, consortial reports, peer reports, and global reports. Also, there will be reports showing inflation trends by subject, publisher, or in general.

There will also be a dynamic approval plan file that will provide more than a Word file of the Library's profile. It will enable staff to answer queries such as: Why did I get this book? Why did I get this slip? Why did I not get a slip or book? There also will be an online log of profile changes available as a report.

Nardini then reviewed the directions that libraries have been asking Yankee to go in. These include help with their internal online workflows, the ability to show a wider context for selection decisions (e.g.,

US/UK, cloth/paper). And, above all, to help them reduce costs.

Nardini outlined the steps that have been taken with this project, which included site visits back in August. There will be a features list sometime this spring. NewGOBI will have two components: the core functions (the ones most closely related to ordering a book) and the advanced functions. There will be no charge for the core functions. There will, however, be a charge for the advanced ones. YBP is currently considering how to decide upon the pricing and will be consulting customers regarding the possibilities. The ideas currently under consideration include a tiered approach based upon the customer's size (or volume of business), use of services by customers or likely use by customers. There will be alpha testing by libraries this spring, and beta testing in the fall. YBP hopes to unveil NewGOBI in the winter of 2001/2002. 🌱 signed by Vyne, letters from Vyne stated it would "have no problem with the idea that SA owns all files created for this project." Vyne allowed SA password access to the site and placed copyright notice of SA's ownership on the site.

For a discussion of industry standard on website creators having no expectation of ownership, see Rinaldo Del Gall, III, Who Owns the Web Site?: the Ultimate Question when a Hiring Party has a Falling-Out with the Web Site Designer, 16 J. Marshall J. Computer & Info. 857, 884 (Summer 1998).

That Last Desperate Scrabbly Defense - Agency Law

I see this as Vyne grasping at straws, but it could be a serious issue for any small business where the owners don't agree on clear lines of authority. Vyne is owned by two shareholders - A & Z. A did all the negotiations with Scientific American, but Z says under their corporate agreement, A had no authority to do so.

Under agency law, the firm - Vyne - is bound by contracts made by A with either actual or apparent authority. If Z had told A to make the contract, you've got actual authority.

A would have apparent authority if Z led Scientific American to believe that A had the authority to act and Scientific American reasonably believed A had the authority. Doxsee Sea Clam Co. v. Brown, 13 F.3d 550, 553 (2d Cir. 1994).

A did most of the meeting with SA. The few meetings which Z attended, A was allowed by Z to do all the talking. Z never told anyone at SA about any limitation on A's authority. It's a two-techie firm. Scientific American had no reason to believe that A lacked the authority to negotiate the contract. Any corporate agreement A & Z had between them limiting A's authority was hidden from Scientific American.

When your materials budget doubles and your staff budget doesn't—OCLC PromptCat can help.

You order books and materials from your vendor, and OCLC PromptCat supplies full MARC records for these titles automatically. In most cases, you will receive your records even before you receive your books!

Using OCLC PromptCat means a faster turnaround for you, so you can get double the materials on your shelves without doubling your staff.
